The preventative curriculum

Easy-read version

Hello from ETI

Who we are and what we do

The Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) is an organisation that inspects the quality of education in schools and Education Other Than at School (EOTAS) centres.

- we work to make things better for you;
- we want to listen to your views to bring about improvements that will help you;
- we work with other people in the government to help improve your experiences of education; and
- in 2021/2022 we carried out an evaluation on the preventative curriculum in schools and EOTAS centres.

What is the preventative curriculum?

We use the term preventative curriculum to describe:

- what the schools/EOTAS centres do to keep you safe;
- what you are learning about to help your personal and emotional development, including health, wellbeing and safety, and relationships; and
- the knowledge and information you are given by your school/centre to help you stay safe and develop healthy relationships, beliefs and attitudes as you grow up.

What primary pupils like

You like learning about the preventative curriculum in the following ways:

making posters on certain topics working altogether in class because it makes learning fun in lots of different ways

C2k Newsdesk (news for children)

assemblies

teamwork games and working towards a goal, like developing a skill or creating something that's fun

going to places outside of school to learn working in pairs

doing spider diagrams about the thing we are learning about. e.g. peer pressure

playing true or false games

What primary pupils want

Primary pupils told us that you want to learn more about:

the harmful effects of addiction

body image issues, body shaming and struggling with self-body love

how to get out of situations that include peer pressure moving schools and how not be anxious about it

how to tell your parent about changes to your body

the changes in my body that are yet to come

how to handle big levels of stress how to keep positive and good thoughts about yourself and how to be happy with who you are cyber bullying and other bullying different types of sexualities and genders

more information about children's rights

how to deal with friendship breakups

What you told us

-  almost all of you feel safe and cared for at school and know who to speak to if you are unhappy or worried;
-  you need most support in managing your emotional health and wellbeing and online and internet safety;
-  you want your views on the preventative curriculum to be heard;
-  you don't like teachers using resources which are outdated or which you have seen/used before; and
-  you would like the preventative curriculum in school to address issues that are relevant right now in your life.

What your schools/centres told us

-  their top priority is to keep you safe;
-  they have focused on teaching you about emotional health and wellbeing and online digital safety as these are big issues for you;
-  they decide on the content of the preventative curriculum, which means some of you learn about particular issues, while some of you do not;
-  they need to do more to get your opinions and those of your parents/carers on the preventative curriculum so you are learning about current issues; and
-  they don't get enough professional support, resources and training to help them to teach you about the more sensitive issues, for example, abuse and child sexual exploitation.

What your parents and governors told us

- they are well-informed about how schools/centres keep you safe;
- they think the preventative curriculum is important to help you to make informed and responsible decisions throughout your life;
- teachers and classroom assistants work hard to look after your wellbeing;
- they would like to know more about the preventative curriculum, such as what you are taught and when; and
- your parents/carers want more information on the preventative curriculum so they can talk about it with you and help your understanding at home.

What needs to be better for you

-  You want to be more involved in designing and reviewing the content of preventative curriculum, and how it is taught.
-  You want confident and knowledgeable teachers and classroom assistants to teach you about the things you want to learn, including the more sensitive issues.
-  You want all schools and centres to review their culture/ethos so that everyone feels welcome, respected and included, even if your views are different than others.
-  Schools/centres need to provide a preventative curriculum which is relevant and useful in your lives, now and the future.
-  School/centres need to review how all subjects can support you in learning about the preventative curriculum and contribute to developing your skills and understanding to make informed decisions.
-  The Department of Education and other government organisations need to work with schools/centres to support teachers to become more confident in planning and delivering the preventative curriculum.

How will we know things are better?

ETI will work with the Department of Education and other organisations to find out how they are supporting schools/centres to make the preventative curriculum more relevant and useful for you.

ETI will ask staff in schools/centres how well they are listening and responding to your views about what you want to learn more about.

ETI will revisit this evaluation in a few years to see what progress has been made.

Glossary

EOTAS centres: EOTAS stands for Education Other Than At School. Some pupils can attend EOTAS centres for a short period of time so the centre can support schools and pupils to focus on wellbeing.

Abuse: Abuse has different forms. It can include emotional, sexual, physical and neglect. The child/young person is never to blame when abuse occurs.

CSE: Child sexual exploitation is a form of child sexual abuse in which a person(s) takes advantage of a child/young person and forces them into a sexual activity in return for something, such as money. Any child/young person can be a victim and it's never their fault.

If you are worried about any of the issues addressed, please talk to an adult in your school/centre.
